- Final results in evaluating Soviet AGs on the basis of CIA Order No. 1242 were to be made up by German experts according to the Russian instructions and from the viewpoint of German economy. Russian instructions to this effect were given only orally and were not followed by written replies from the Germans. Since the original appraisals of the Germans had subjected the appraisers to much pressure from the Russians, sources believe that German experts will be reluctant to commit themselves in writing. They are, however, not quite sure that some of the Russian-Formed appraisals are from twenty-five to fifty percent, and on the average about one-third, of the actual value of the firms.
2. Because of the pressure under which SACs are operated, only meager, reliable information from them is available. In spite of Soviet statements to the contrary, Soviet AGs cannot be claimed as AGs under German law, since they do not follow its requirements. Legally, they should never have been admitted to the trade register. According to statements of November 1947, the SACs are only loaners and not owners of the enterprises they have absorbed: the real owner is the USSR. In view of the special privileges accorded SAC employees (better food and supplies of necessities), the Russians appear to be preparing to utilize the firms not only as business adjuncts but also as centers for political propaganda.
3. The Russians have been pressing for rapid execution of liquidations of residual firms of Soviet AGs. Document No. 2087, a list of assets of residual firms was prepared, with TWO CHANGING ATTITUDE, which could not supply documents and 10 firms which have been placed under control of Colonel Meyer. Figures from the firms which have been placed under control of Colonel Meyer, signed from the attachments.
